Attorney Treat said that that was addressed in section 5 of the ordinance, which he then read. Ultimately if issues were not resolved, they would be addressed by a court of common pleas and possible jail time. Clarification on how the ordinance would impact farmers was asked for and Treat explained that active, ongoing farms use implements and machinery are not considered junk. Agricultural rights are protected. As far as things that don't work, that is up to the supervisor's discretion. Ron Poska asked for a condensed version of what the ordinance was about. Treat explained that the ordinance was meant to address issues that keep coming up. Areas that he mentioned were as follows: dangerous buildings, rodents, infestation, junk, overgrown vegetation, abandoned vehicles, garbage, rubbish, junk vehicles, foul water, offensive water drainage, burning trees, tar products, and plastic, growth that inhibits driver safety, testing for on-site sewage systems, pushing snow out into the road, and noise, light source, and smells (intensity, frequency, location). Complaints will be made to Supervisors or an appointed representative. A written note will be issued either by certified mail, a notice on a door, or a published legal ad in the newspaper for two consecutive weeks. Costs to the township will be recovered from the parties involved. Chair Coles made a motion, seconded by Brian Non to pass the Ordinance Prohibiting Nuisances on Private and Public Property. All voted yes. The motion carried. Matt Curtis asked if the ordinance would be published on the township website. Chair Coles said he was against it.
